GROUP DISCUSSION

Comprehension

- Strategy: Key Details
Think of 2 key details each from the beginning, middle, and end of the story.
- Strategy: Cause and Effect
Think about events in the story that caused other events to happen. Discuss using the sentence stem: “When ___ then ___.” or “___ caused ___ to happen.”
- Strategy: Theme
Think of 4 to 6 details in the story that support the theme of: “It’s good to try hard things—even when you don’t feel brave at first.”

GROUP ACTIVITIES

The mind is a powerful tool. Talk about the benefits of having an active imagination.

- Ask: “How can people use their imagination to escape hard experiences that caused them to have feelings like fear, joy, sadness, anxiety, or depression?”
- Ask: “Have you ever read about something you’d like to do or be when you grow up?”
- Ask: “How can you support someone who is afraid?” “What are some things you can say to them?”
- Ask: “What topic(s) would you like to learn more about in a library book?”

INDEPENDENT ACTIVITIES

- Think about your own connections to favorite stories, people, things, or topics. How do these things support or encourage you? Draw or paint a portrait of yourself in color against a blue background. Add images of thoughts that make you happy or give you comfort and encouragement in white to give the effect of a window into your thoughts. (See the illustrations on the last page in the book.) Add words that describe your thoughts such as: be brave, adventure ahead, show kindness, be helpful, be strong, listen, love, be happy, find joy, be silly, try again, or work hard.
- Write a letter to your librarian at school or one in your community and thank them for something they’ve taught you or helped you with. Ask them a question.
- Create a community-helper poster celebrating or showing appreciation for what community helpers do in your neighborhood. The poster could include: nurses, doctors, veterinarians, firefighters, police officers, counselors, librarians, teachers, bus drivers, dentists, store clerks, or anyone else who helps make your community a safe place. With permission, post it in a coffee shop, school, hospital, or library.
